Verizon has no basis to again seek to delay wireless number portability. It serves no one's purpose other than its own -- requiring areas like Philadelphia to be inundated with new area codes for each time a new number is given to a wireless customer, another number becomes unavailable for use. Personally, I have had 5 wireless numbers in the last eight years as a result of switching providers. Multiply that by the number of cell phones in Philadelphia and the result in mind boggling. Please reject their request.
